Data Collection Process

What we got, where we got it from, and how we got it.

Platforms

Twitter

Often posted close to actual event, live updates

Facebook

More detailed posts, not as close to event

News Sources

Resource for many core facts, not as close to event occurrence

Other

Wikipedia, Reddit, etc.

How we collected data

Google Trends

We used the Google Trend graph number of hits per day to gather proportional amounts of data points per day

Online Searches

Search Terms:
“Hurricane” + “Florence”
Or “Dorian” on either Google or a specific social media platform

Our Findings

How much variation exists in the types of information different online spaces provide during crises?

Twitter has the fastest time to post but small artifacts of information

Facebook has longer posts and more emotional investment

News sources have the most detailed information but are more delayed than social media

How does the density of useful information change over the course of the disaster?

More information leading up to when hurricanes make landfall

Significantly less information after landfall

Project incident activity and life, safety and health threat management details were highest ICS

What info was missing

Information about initial formation of hurricane (a.k.a. Meteorological history)

Looked at U.S. centric social media

See immediate damages but nothing outside of visible property damage

Conclusion

Analyzing unique facts as data points from social media was a new experience for one of us. We learned a lot about the specific timeline of each hurricane off of social media - including data points that are sometimes left out of news reports or summary pages such as Wikipedia. In conclusion this project opened our eyes to the value of social media for information distribution during times of crisis.

Constraints

Types of information

We collected as much information on the Internet as we could find, proportional to the popularity on Google Trends.

We did not find unique facts.

Manual collection

Our collection was done through search terms on different platforms and might not capture the entire information present for the hurricanes

Whoa!

This can be the part of the presentation where you introduce yourself, write your email...

Introduction

You can give a brief description of the topic you want to talk about here. For example, if you want to talk about Mercury, you can say that it's the smallest planet in the entire Solar System

About hurricanes

Mercury is the closest planet to the Sun and the smallest one in the entire Solar System. This planet's name has nothing to do with the liquid metal, since Mercury was named after the Roman messenger god. Despite being closer to the Sun than Venus, its temperatures aren't as terribly hot as that planet's. Its surface is quite similar to that of Earth's Moon, which means there are a lot of craters and plains

Speaking of craters, many of them were named after artists or authors who made significant contributions to their respective fields. Mercury takes a little more than 58 days to complete its rotation, so try to imagine how long days must be there! Since the temperatures are so extreme, albeit not as extreme as in Venus, and the solar radiation is so high, Mercury has been deemed to be non-habitable for humans

Regions at risk

Do you know what helps you make your point clear? Lists like this one:

- They're simple
- You can organize your ideas clearly
- You'll never forget to buy milk!

And the most important thing: the audience won't miss the point of your presentation

How does a hurricane originate?

Mercury

It's the closest planet to the Sun and the smallest one in the Solar System

Venus

Venus has a beautiful name and is the second planet from the Sun

Mars

Despite being red, Mars is actually a cold place. It's full of iron oxide dust
